- 9.40 - 10.35 Priorities for improving the pathway: off-the-job training, end-point assessment and apprentice experience
With Ofsted figures showing that nearly half of all registered apprenticeship providers inspected were inadequate or required improvement, what needs to be done to improve quality and reduce variation by sector, particularly at Level 2 and 3? How well are levy payers managing with freedom to pick their own training providers, what support is needed to help them navigate the market? To what extent does off-the-job training contribute to the quality of apprenticeships, and with Ofsted not tracking how long apprentices spend on off-the-job training as part of inspections, how should the rule be effectively enforced? Does more need to be done to ensure suitable end-point assessors are being chosen and how can External Quality Assurance be better clarified? With Government figures showing a drop in apprenticeship starts despite high levels of satisfaction from learners, what are the next steps for employers and providers to communicate the benefits of apprenticeships?
