With NHS England inviting developers and housing associations to join a national network to make healthy living a priority for future home building, what lessons can be learnt from existing Healthy New Town demonstrator sites to benefit new housing developments across the country? What more needs to be done to identify future housing needs in local areas, particularly for the ageing population? How can commissioners best utilise the built and natural environment to tackle challenges around obesity, dementia and social isolation, and what opportunities exist for integrated care systems to take advantage of housing to address sustainability issues?
Dr Rosie Rowe, Director, Bicester Healthy New Town Programme, Oxfordshire Clinical Commissioning Group
Tom Lelyveld, Regional Director, AECOM
