- 10.00 - 10.50 Key issues for data protection: responding to cyber attacks, GDPR compliance and the Data Protection Bill
Following a report from the House of Commons Public Accounts Committee which warns that plans to learn lessons from last year's WannaCry attack are still to be agreed, what more needs to be done to improve cyber security across the NHS, and how can learning so far from implementing the Directive on Security of Network and Information Systems best be applied? How successfully are NHS organisations adopting data security standards such as training for staff, reviews of the process and contingency plans as recommended by the independent National Data Guardian for Health and Care? What lessons can be learnt from preparation on being GDPR compliant, including internal processes in place to ensure personal data breaches are reported within 72 hours, and as the Data Protection Bill passes through Parliament, what more can be done to better enable use of data?
