- 11.15 - 12.30 Provider responsibility, public trust and the future of the regulatory framework
As the awareness and visibility of offensive content increases, what is the latest thinking on where responsibilities lie for preventing and removing inappropriate and hateful content online? What would be the practical steps and challenges for ISPs, platforms, content sites and social media providers? Where should be the parameters of where and how providers aid Government and other authorities, and in communicating with the public on the issues? At a time when the UK is negotiating its exit from the EU, and with regulation forthcoming from EU GDPR and the recently announced NIS Directive, what are the key legal implications facing both providers and citizens currently and moving forwards?
