Lorraine Petersen, Chief Executive, nasen
Questions and comments from the floor
- 9.35 - 10.30 Inclusion or Special Schools? The future direction for policy
Themes: How is the current system working for pupils, parents and teachers? Is there currently a 'bias towards inclusion', as suggested by government, and how has this affected schools and pupils? Is there currently a stigma attached to special schools? If so, how should this be addressed? Are there financial implications for favouring either inclusion or special schools? What is the impact of inclusion for pupils without Special Educational Needs (SEN)? Does co-location of special schools with mainstream schools present a better alternative? What strategies could be implemented to reduce the high number of exclusions for pupils with SEN?
Simone Aspis, Campaigns and Policy Coordinator, The Alliance for Inclusive Education
Heather Stack, Director & SEN Consultant, Learning Services (SEN)
Fin O'Regan, SEN and Behaviour Consultant, Specialist Schools and Academies Trust

Questions and comments from the floor
- 12.05 - 12.55 The future organisation of SEN provision
Themes: How significant are budgetary cuts in this area likely to be, and how will this impact on SEN provision? What should be the future role for Local Authorities as SEN providers, with more schools becoming academies and free schools being introduced? Will the abolition of organisations such as Becta and the QCDA affect the support that schools receive? Should voluntary organisations play a bigger role in the provision of SEN? How will SEN provision work in academies and free schools? Would one-to-one tuition for all SEN pupils help improve pupil attainment? How does early diagnosis of SEN help the pupil, and what is the most effective way of identifying SEN early? How can the pupil premium be best utilised for SEN pupils? Does the current statement system provide appropriate support to pupils with SEN, and should changes be considered?
