- 9.15 - 10.05 Commissioning services, improving public health and patient engagement
One year on from the launch of NHS England in commissioning dental services, what more can be done to tackle challenges for individual practitioners of resource allocation? What will be the impact of categorisation of patients as red, amber or green in supporting health professionals in the commissioning and allocation of services? What further steps can be taken by health professionals and others to emphasise prevention, and promote the care pathway approach in dental public health? What additional opportunities exist to improve patient health outcomes, particularly amongst those over 45, following increased practitioner engagement with bodies including Health and Wellbeing Boards and Public Health England? What more can be done by health professionals to inform patients about the full range of treatments available to them?
Henrik Overgaard-Nielsen, Chair, Federation of London Local Dental Committees
