Following the launch of NHS England's Five Year Forward View, how can healthcare professionals best work together to improve co-ordination of diabetes services and deliver better value for money? In what further ways should patients be supported to self-care and become more involved in managing their condition? What impact will changes recommended by NICE on Quality Outcomes Framework indicators, including annual checks for diabetes patients, have on reducing complications? Following the launch of Healthier Lives, which ranks the performance of Clinical Commissioning Groups and GP practices by treatment targets, care processes, complications, prevalence and risk, what more should be done to measure and disseminate good practice? With the National Diabetes Inpatient Audit due to take place in September, what is the potential for data in delivering more personalised care for people living with diabetes?
Dr Nick Morrish, Consultant Diabetologist, Bedford Hospital NHS Trust and Clinical Lead for Diabetes,
East of England Cardiovascular Strategic Clinical Network
