- 9.05 - 9.35 Long-term strategy for energy efficiency in Scotland
Paul Wheelhouse MSP, Minister for Business, Innovation and Energy, The Scottish Government
Questions and comments from the floor
- 9.35 - 10.35 Priorities for Scotland's Energy Efficiency Programme - pilot programmes, procurement and private sector finance
As the Scottish Government prepares to roll out Scotland's Energy Efficiency Programme (SEEP) in 2018, what can we learn from initial pilots about innovative approaches to improving energy efficiency across domestic and non-domestic settings? What can the recently announced Phase 2 SEEP pilots tell us about potential approaches to designing and implementing Local Heat and Energy Efficiency Strategies, which the Scottish Government is currently considering introducing on a statutory basis? How can initiatives, such as Scotland Excel's recently announced £800m procurement contract, and finance providers from the private sector, work in tandem with SEEP pilots to deliver energy efficiency improvements across local authorities and housing associations? Following consultation by the Scottish Government on potential changes to district heating regulation, what measures are needed to support the further development of district heating networks and what lessons can be learnt from district heating systems already in place, particularly in relation to their funding, planning and coordination of stakeholders?
Janice Pauwels, Head of Energy and Low Carbon, City of Edinburgh Council
Sam Illsley, Programme Manager, Scotland, Salix Finance
Dave Pearson, Director, Star Renewable Energy

Tim Maiden, Partner, CAG Consultants
- 11.20 - 12.20 Next steps for domestic energy efficiency - regulation, sustainable design and tackling fuel poverty
With the Scottish Government set to gain further powers over the design and implementation of the Energy Company Obligation (ECO) by April 2018, how can energy companies, regulators and consumer groups work together to ensure that any potential changes to a devolved ECO have the most effective impact on reducing fuel poverty in Scotland? How can architecture and design professionals employ principles of sustainable design - such as the Passivhaus Standard, which seeks to reduce the need for heating and cooling - to ensure that buildings in Scotland are energy efficient from the outset?
