What challenges has the implementation of a revised commissioning structure for offender health services - including a new national approach to contract tendering - brought about, and how is an evolving framework addressing challenges relating to health inequalities and service integration? How are diverse approaches to offender healthcare - both within custody and outside - impacting on service integration, and how can NHS England and Clinical Commissioning Groups (CCGs) ensure that health outcomes for offenders are improved in prison as well as the community? How has the launch of the commissioning structure impacted on different demographics across the criminal justice system so far, and in what ways can service delivery be better tailored to address the needs of adult offenders, youth offenders and children in secure accommodation? What more can the reformed model do to improve wider criminal justice outcomes - such as reduced reoffending and rehabilitation in the community? How far has the model progressed since its inception in April 2013, and what future priorities lie ahead for NHS England area teams and regional teams? What is the role of local partnerships in the emerging offender health landscape - such as Local Prison Partnership Boards and Health and Criminal Justice Boards - and what more can be done to foster co-operation with NHS England offender health teams?
