- 9.55 - 10.45 Key issues for service redesign: Medicine Use Reviews, treating minor ailments and Essential Small Pharmacies
To what extent will proposed reforms to service redesign change the role of pharmacists, and what is the likely impact of new ways of working on reducing pressures across the NHS? What is the potential for the redesign of Medical Use Reviews in better treating patients at high risk and with multiple co-morbidities and - with concerns about the particular challenges around accessing Summary Care Records - how can the practical issues around putting into practice these extended reviews be resolved? With Clinical Commissioning Groups expected to have their own minor ailments schemes in place by April 2018, what more needs to be done to reduce regional variations and ensure quality of service delivery? With the drive across the NHS for efficiency savings, what more should be done to protect funding for Essential Small Pharmacies?
Hemant Patel, Secretary, North East London Local Pharmaceutical Committee
Ian Strachan, Chairman, National Pharmacy Association
Saima Ansar, Clinical Pharmacist, Oldham GP Federation
Dr Anita Sharma, GP and Clinical Director (Vascular), NHS Oldham Clinical Commissioning Group and GP Member, NICE Quality Standard Advisory Committee

- 11.35 - 12.30 Training priorities: efficiency and safety, medicines optimisation and working with automation
How can universities and other education providers ensure pharmacists enter the profession with appropriate multi-disciplinary skills, and what more needs to be done to utilise and develop these skills at a post-graduate level? With the General Pharmaceutical Council setting out new standards on the education and training of pharmacy technicians, what are the next steps for giving more responsibilities to the profession and other associated professions? To what extent is pharmacy training adequate for medicines optimisation to ensure correct usage, reduced wastage and improved safety when prescribing medicines? What are the implications for increased use of informatics and automation for the pharmacy workforce?
