Nick Ceadel, Lead, PE and Sport Team, Department for Education
- 9.40 - 10.40 Embedding physical activity and promoting healthy lifestyles throughout schools: resource allocation, outreach and partnerships, and implementing the Childhood Obesity Plan
What will be the likely impact of the healthy pupils capital programme, expected to be introduced in 2018; how can schools best use the funds to improve pupils' physical wellbeing? In what ways can physical literacy be embedded in children's daily school routines; what should be the role of external organisations, such as local authorities, county sports partnerships and charities in supporting this aim? How can primary schools be supported to use the introduction of the voluntary 'healthy schools rating' to promote good practice in preventing obesity; in particular, how can best practice be shared? How can the impact of the doubling of the primary PE and Sport premium be maximised; what can be learnt from examples of best practice and how can outcomes for pupils be measured? How can schools improve engagement with parents and carers to encourage children to partake in further physical activity outside of school and during school holidays?

- 11.55 - 12.55 Improving PE provision in schools: access and diversity, the role of staff training and promoting innovation in teaching
How can PE teachers be enabled and encouraged to share best practice and innovative teaching methods; should, as the APPG on Fit and Healthy Childhood recommended, a national PE Taskforce be established to gather examples of good practice and use these to develop a 'what works in PE' document? What further support, training and CPD opportunities should be made available for PE teachers to develop their skill sets? What role can external coaches play in improving the quality of PE provision in schools? What more can schools do to promote lifelong engagement in sport amongst currently underrepresented groups, including girls and minority groups? How can schools improve and extend PE provision for disabled children, such as through the use of inclusive teaching techniques and appropriate equipment, and what examples of best practice exist?
