- 11.30 - 12.55 Social prescribing in practice - costs, quality and evaluating outcomes
How do the overall costs and outcomes of social interventions compare with traditional approaches? How can complex interventions be accurately evaluated - is further research required on the impact of social prescribing, and on value for money? What is the potential role for 'link workers' in coordinating service users and providers? How can the third sector increase access to social interventions and engage with health professionals to transform care within their local communities; how can the increased demand on the sector's services be best managed, and what impact might the provision of such services have upon the long-term sustainability of care as a whole? Following the publication of the All-Party Parliamentary Inquiry into Arts, Health and Wellbeing, what is the way forward for the involvement of established cultural, sporting and conservation organisations in social prescribing and what steps should be taken to facilitate collaboration in this approach?
Dr Charlotte Augst, Director, Richmond Group Partnership
Professor Chris Drinkwater, Chair, Ways to Wellness
