Questions and comments from the floor with senior speaker, national funding body
- 9.45 - 10.55 Ethics in sport: trust, enforcement and priorities going forward
What is the state of public trust in sport, and what are the key remaining issues? How effective a basis does the new Code for Sports Governance provide for strengthening the UK sport sector's image and ethics regime? What will be the challenges for implementation and what further measures might be considered - including increased funding for anti-doping programmes, harmonising the legal framework on corruption, and facilitating the development of integrity teams for individual sports? How effective is the current approach to anti-doping in the UK and what more could be done in terms of prevention - including in the area of education for athletes, and possible introduction of further sanctions and reform of the TUE (Therapeutic Use Exemption) system? In light of ongoing investigations into corruption in sport - particularly match-fixing and tax fraud - what should be the priorities for governments, enforcement agencies, sports bodies and the gambling industry in tackling the issues, including improved international co-operation and information sharing, adapting the format of sporting competitions to avoid incentivising match manipulation, and enhanced monitoring processes? How should the international community approach developing a global integrity code and its implementation, and what role can the UK play in setting standards?

- 11.25 - 11.30 Chair's opening remarks
Senior Parliamentarian
- 11.30 - 11.40 Duty of Care in Sport Review: key findings and next steps
Following the independent review led by Baroness Grey-Thompson into duty of care in sport, what are the next steps in terms of policy and industry for implementing the key recommendations from the report - including appointing a Sports Ombudsman and Duty of Care Guardians to NGB boards, improving links with education and health organisations, developing induction and exit programmes for athletes, and introducing standardised safeguarding and mental health training?
Senior commentator
- 11.40 - 12.30 Priorities for promoting the safety, wellbeing and welfare of participants in sport
In light of growing concerns over bullying, safety and safeguarding in sport - in the context of the pressures of an increasing drive towards international competitiveness - what should be the scope of the responsibilities that the UK sport sector has for participants, and what should be the key considerations in ensuring a safe environment for all involved and supporting the physical and mental health of athletes? What resource and organisational challenges does this pose for sporting bodies and facilities providers at all levels and how can these be addressed? How clear are the current exit routes for those leaving elite sport and what further support could NGBs and clubs offer to help the transition? How well do the recommendations in the Duty of Care in Sport Review address the key issues around promoting the safety, wellbeing and welfare of participants, and how can concerns regarding funding and compliance be addressed?
